

In 2016, the Oakland Summer Learning Network commissioned the National Summer Learning Association (NSLA), with the support of the Packard Foundation, to conduct a landscape assessment of summer learning programs in the city. This report summarizes key data points from that assessment.

Oakland, California | 2016 Summer Learning Landscape Assessment

Summer Learning in Oakland

Children and youth in Oakland benefit from significant investments in summer learning by the city, school district, and private philanthropy to provide summer learning opportunities to more than 12,000 young people. Oakland Unified School District (OUSD) partners with a number of community-based organizations (CBOs) to serve more than 6,500 students. Through the Oakland Fund for Children and Youth (OFCY), the city provides funding to CBOs to serve more than 2,400 students, many in partnership with OUSD programming. Still more students are served by Oakland Parks and Recreation, city libraries, and community based organizations operating alongside this system. With such great diversity of programs, funding, and partnerships, there is a need for coordination and collaboration to ensure as many young people as possible are provided with high-quality summer learning opportunities.

Created in 2011, the Oakland Summer Learning Network (OSLN) is a collaborative effort between OUSD, OFCY, and a number of CBOs aimed at developing a citywide system of quality summer learning opportunities in Oakland. In 2014, the Partnership for Children and Youth took on the convening role for the group with funding from the Rogers, Scully, and Long Foundations. OSLN's vision is that all of Oakland's children and youth will have equitable access to high-quality summer learning opportunities.

The purpose of this report is to highlight the findings of a community assessment of Oakland's summer learning landscape during summer 2016. The assessment offers a snapshot of existing summer programs. Data were collected on who was being served by these programs and the kinds of programming they offered. This assessment gives OSLN a chance to learn more about the range of summer opportunities available, as well as gaps in services or data.

Summary of Findings

- In 2016, the largest investments in summer learning were from OUSD and OFCY. Together they provided over $6 million in funding to 24 partner organizations and grantees, including over $1 million in local unrestricted dollars from OUSD.
- A number of CBOs served students with funding from OFCY and as partners with OUSD. Considerable effort was made to identify duplicated information about these programs, such as youth enrollment or funding, when totaling these data.
- A subset of 18 programs report data on 2016 funding sources. While the most common funding source was local, such as OFCY, more than one-third of programs received funds from a private foundation or organization. Eighty-two percent of programs did not report charging participants a fee.

SUMMER LEARNING SYSTEM ASSESSMENT

NSLA developed a three-phase approach to summer learning system building to help communities reach more youth with high-quality summer opportunities. This approach aims to foster collaboration between local community organizations and institutions. During the community assessment phase of this process, OSLN completed a self-assessment based on NSLA's Community Indicators of Effective Summer Learning Systems rating scale to examine the size, scope, and features of their summer learning system within six key domains. As a result of this process, OSLN identified three goals for their 2016 collaborative work:

Data Management System
Collect and utilize data to raise awareness of the benefits of equitable, high quality summer programming. OSLN is establishing a system for collecting and sharing data in order to better understand the needs of the children and youth being served (and not served), the programs available, and the unmet need for additional quality summer learning opportunities.

Marketing and Communications
Improve communication to increase equitable access to summer programming. OSLN created an interactive and informative guide to summer learning opportunities in Oakland, which can be found at Oakland.inplay.org.

Continuous Quality Improvement
Support high quality summer learning through continuous improvement. OSLN is developing a system of support in which the OSLN member organizations raise awareness about the value of continuous improvement, provide training and technical assistance, and learn from each other.

Limitations of the Data

Incomplete and Estimated Data. Complete data may not have been received from all targeted organizations and agencies for varying reasons. When considered as a whole, it is likely that incomplete and estimated data may have led to an underestimate of the total summer learning program landscape.

Double Counting. Because youth can participate in more than one program during the summer, they may be counted multiple times in the data used for this report. Where possible, we attempted to remove duplicate counts of children and youth.

Snapshot in Time. Data collection for this resource scan focused on summer 2016 and represents a snapshot in time. The extent to which providers are able to offer programs and the size of those programs may vary from year to year, sometimes substantially, based on available funding.
